Defendants.

THE UNITED STATES GRAND JURY CHARGES THAT:

OVERVIEW OF THE SEX TRAFFICKING ORGANIZATION

1. The defendants, along with others known and unknown to the grand jury, are members of a large-scale international sex trafficking organization. Through the use of bondage debt and other means of force, fraud, and coercion, the organization traffics women from Thailand to cities across the United States, where the women are forced to engage in countless commercial sex acts for the financial benefit of the criminal enterprise. The women do not have freedom of movement and, until they pay off their bondage debt, are effectively modern day sex slaves.

2. Since at least 2009 and continuing until the present, the sex trafficking enterprise has trafficked hundreds of Thai women from Bangkok, Thailand, to various cities across the United States, including Los Angeles, Minneapolis, Chicago, Atlanta, Phoenix, Washington, D.C., Las Vegas, Houston, Dallas, and Austin. The women, called "flowers" by the organization, are often from impoverished backgrounds and speak little English. Members of the criminal organization recruit these victims from Thailand with promises of a better life in the United States. The organization engages in widespread visa fraud in order to transport the victims to the United States.

3. Once in the United States, the victims are sent to “houses of prostitution” in cities across the country. There, the victims are forced to work long hours—often all day, every day—having sex with strangers in order to attempt to pay down their bondage debt. The victims are isolated. They do not have freedom of movement. They are only allowed to leave the prostitution houses in the company of “runners” who work for the criminal organization. The victims do not have the ability to choose who they have sex with, what sex transactions they will engage in, or when they will have sex. Until they pay off their exorbitant bondage debt—often between $40,000 and $60,000—the victims are “owned” by the organization.

DEFENDANTS AND THEIR ROLES

4. At all times relevant to this Indictment, the defendants and other members of the criminal conspiracy, both known and unknown to the grand jury, worked together to coordinate the movement of Thai women across the Pacific Ocean and throughout the United States to engage in commercial sex acts. A number of different roles in the criminal organization are held by members of the conspiracy, to include:

a. Defendant SUMALEE INTARATHONG served as a boss/trafficker. A boss/trafficker is the individual to whom a victim of sex trafficking owes her bondage debt. A boss/trafficker recruits the victim directly in Thailand to enter into the bondage debt scheme with the trafficker. The boss/trafficker facilitates the travel of the victim to the United States and “owns” the victim until the bondage debt is paid.

b. Defendants SUMALEE INTARATHONG, CHABAPRAI BOONLUEA, WATCHARIN LUAMSEEJUN, and PANTILLA RODPHOLKA acted as “house bosses” in the respective cities of Minneapolis, Atlanta, Phoenix, and Chicago. A house boss “owns” one or more of the houses of prostitution, which can in fact be apartments, hotels, houses, and massage parlors. The organization uses these locations throughout the United States to conduct its sex trafficking operation. The house boss runs the day-to-day operations at these locations, including advertising the trafficking victims for commercial sex acts (or “dates”), procuring and maintaining the houses of prostitution, scheduling sex buyers (or “Johns”), and ensuring that a portion of the cash made by the victims is routed back to the boss/trafficker to pay down the bondage debt. House bosses coordinate with traffickers and with one another to facilitate the travel of victims across the United States. In return for their services, the house bosses take a significant portion of the cash the victims receive from the commercial sex acts. A boss/trafficker may also act as a house boss in order to maximize their profit, as in the case of SUMALEE INTARATHONG.

c. Defendants NOPPAWAN LERSLURCHACHAI, KHANONG INTARATHONG, SOYSUDA SIANGDANG, and ANDREW FLANIGAN served as “facilitators” for the organization, assisting in the commercial sex and money laundering activities of the organization. Specifically, NOPPAWAN LERSLURCHACHAI laundered money for the organization and directed the movement of victims across the United States, including by booking travel for the victims. Defendants KHANONG INTHARATHONG, SOYSUDA SIANGDANG, and ANDREW FLANIGAN facilitated the sex trafficking by advertising the victims for commercial sex, arranging for the travel of victims across the United States, and laundering the illicit proceeds for the organization.

d. Defendants THI VU, TODD VASSEY, JOHN ZBARACKI, and JOHN NG acted as “runners” for the organization. The victims trafficked by this organization are not allowed to leave the prostitution houses unaccompanied, for fear that they might run away from the trafficking organization. Accordingly, the house bosses employ runners to, among other things, escort the victims to and from the airport, on trips for personal items, and to the bank to deposit money to pay back their bondage debt. Runners may also be asked to rent hotel rooms, apartments, or other facilities for the organization. Runners are typically men and may be paid, in part, in sex with the victims.

e. Defendants PATCHARAPORN SAENGKHAM, [REDACTED], [REDACTED], YADAPORN PANNGOEN, SUPAPON SONPRASIT, and [REDACTED] are members of the criminal conspiracy who began as victims, but then rose within the organization to themselves facilitate the trafficking of other women and the ongoing operations of the criminal organization.

did, in and affecting interstate and foreign commerce, knowingly conspire with one another and others, known and unknown to the grand jury, to recruit, entice, harbor, transport, provide, obtain, and maintain, by any means, a person, and benefitted, financially and by receiving anything of value, from participation in a venture which engaged in the previously described acts, and knowing that means of force, threats of force, fraud, coercion, and any combination of such means would be used to cause the person to engage in a commercial sex act, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Sections 1591(a), 1591(b)(1), and 1594(a).

THE PURPOSE OF THE CONSPIRACY

7. The purpose of the conspiracy was for the sex trafficking organization to make money by arranging for Thai women to travel to the United States and, at various houses of prostitution in cities throughout the United States, engage in innumerable commercial sex acts.

THE MANNER AND MEANS OF THE CONSPIRACY

8. To achieve the purpose of the conspiracy, the defendants recruited victims from Thailand, entered into bondage debt "contracts" with the victims, facilitated the travel of the victims from Thailand to the United States by engaging in widespread visa fraud, advertised the victims for commercial sex in the United States, arranged and facilitated such transactions, isolated and moved the women between various houses of prostitution in the State and District of Minnesota and elsewhere, and laundered the illicit proceeds in the State and District of Minnesota and elsewhere. In particular, the defendants, together with others known and unknown to the grand jury, committed the following acts.

The Recruitment in Thailand

9. Members of the conspiracy recruit women in Thailand, which the organizations calls "flowers," to enter into debt bondage "contracts" with the criminal organization. The victims of the sex trafficking scheme are typically Thai women from impoverished backgrounds. When a victim enters into the debt bondage “contract,” the victim generally agrees to incur a significant debt—one which, in her native country, neither the victim nor her family could ever hope to repay—in exchange for a visa and travel to the United States. The bondage debt amount far exceeds the actual expenses the trafficker incurs to bring the victim to the United States.

10. Prior to transporting the victims to the United States, the organization will typically arrange to have professional-quality escort-style photographs of the victims in lingerie and in various states of undress taken in Thailand. These photographs are sent from the traffickers in Thailand to various members of the conspiracy in the United States and are ultimately used to advertise the victims for commercial sex transactions, often on websites such as backpage.com and eros.com.

11. Traffickers will often encourage the victims to undergo breast augmentation plastic surgery in Thailand in order to make the victims more “appealing” to potential sex buyers in the United States. The cost of the plastic surgery is added to the victims’ already significant bondage debt.

12. The organization facilitates the international transportation of the victims by engaging in widespread visa fraud. Members of the organization assist victims in obtaining fraudulent visas and travel documents through the use of false statements. As a part of obtaining visa documents, members of the criminal conspiracy will gather personal information from the victims, including the location of the victims’ families in Thailand. In the event that a victim becomes non-compliant or escapes the organization in the United States, this information may be used to threaten the victim and/or her family. Traffickers coach the victims as to what to say to law enforcement and customs and border protection officials in the United States in order to avoid detection and ultimately receive a visa.

The Force, Fraud, and Coercion in the United States

13. The victims typically enter the United States through Los Angeles, California. The victims are then sent to various houses of prostitution throughout the United States, including to Minnesota, where the victims work to pay down their bondage debt by engaging in numerous commercial sex transactions.

14. Once in the United States, victims often find they have been brought to the United States under false pretenses. In Thailand, while traffickers tell a victim that she will engage in prostitution activities, the trafficker often paints a rosy picture of life in the United States, with promises that the victim will quickly be able to pay down her debt, support her family in Thailand, and make a better life for herself in the United States. However, once a victim enters the United States, the terms of the "contract" often change dramatically to favor the trafficking organization. For instance, while a victim may make $180 from a commercial sex transaction, only a portion of that money (approximately $100) will go to pay down her bondage debt. The rest of the profits ($80) are paid to the "house boss," and a victim is allowed to keep little to none of the money she makes engaging in commercial sex acts. Additionally, victims are often charged for all manner of things, such as housing, travel, or even food, such that the ability to pay down the bondage debt is further reduced.

15. While traffickers may portray themselves as kind and sympathetic during the recruitment process in Thailand, once a victim enters the United States, the traffickers often turn controlling, manipulative, threatening, and violent. The traffickers enforce the terms of the bondage debt through means of force, and threats of force, legal process (including alerting immigration officials), and deportation. The traffickers use those means to control a victim and, in instances where a victim has escaped or run away from the organization, compel a victim to continue working or return to work.

16. For example, in 2010, SUMALEE INTARATHONG recruited Victim 1 in Bangkok, Thailand. Victim 1 agreed to work for the criminal organization under a $40,000 bondage debt. The organization filled out false visa paperwork for Victim 1, created and funded a false bank account for Victim 1, and coached Victim 1 on what to say to immigration officials in order to gain entry to the United States. When Victim 1 entered the United States, she was sent to work at two different houses of prostitution. Victim 1 did not have freedom of movement and was not allowed to leave the prostitution house unless she was accompanied by a "runner," who would guard Victim 1 to make sure that she did not run away. Victim 1 worked six to seven days a week, twelve hours a day, engaging in commercial sex transactions. Victim 1 found that the repayment terms of her bondage debt "contract" significantly changed (to favor the criminal organization) once Victim 1 arrived in the United States. SUMALEE INTARATHONG verbally abused and isolated Victim 1, and ultimately demoted Victim 1 to working in a "spa" in Houston, Texas. The "spa" was open twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week. Victim 1 lived on a mattress on the floor with another victim. Victim 1 was not allowed to leave the "spa."

Whenever a sex buyer would enter the spa—at all times of the day and night—Victim 1 was required to engage in commercial sex with the sex buyer for the benefit of the sex trafficking organization. One night, Victim 1 ran away. Soon after Victim 1 disappeared, she began to receive threatening emails from SUMALEE INTARATHONG, which included a threat that “...If you not contact me in 24 hour I will send someone to your family.” Victim 1 understood that to mean that gangsters in Thailand associated with the sex trafficking organization would be sent to harm Victim 1’s family in Thailand. SUMALEE INTARATHONG additionally threatened Victim 1 with legal process: “I give you a chance to contact me in 24 hour, But you not take it, I will link your web page from escort website page to US EMBASSY, including your details: Your name, your date of birth your passport number..ETC and they will cancel your visa, SIMPLE THATIF YOU NOT BELIEVE YOU CAN TRY THIS LINK.” To this email, SUMALEE INTARATHONG attached a link to an escort advertisement posted by the criminal organization featuring Victim 1.

17. The criminal organization also controls the victims by isolating them from the outside world. The victims, who often speak little to no English and are illegally present in the United States, live in the houses of prostitution. They do not have control over their movements and are typically only allowed to leave the prostitution houses if they are accompanied by “runners.” The runners are often “clients” of the organization who may be compensated through sex with the victims. The victims are not allowed to decline commercial sex buyers who might be physically or sexually abusive or otherwise unwanted. The victims are advertised for commercial sex transactions in any number of ways, including in online escort ads on websites such as backpage.com and eros.com. The victims are often expected to have sex with numerous men in a given day.

18. At various times, the organization operated out of at least seven identified houses of prostitution in the Minneapolis area and trafficked more than a dozen victims throughout Minnesota. For example, upon her arrival at the Minneapolis/St. Paul airport, JOHN ZBARACKI met Victim 2 and drove her to Bloomington, Minnesota, to purchase condoms and food. JOHN ZBARACKI then transported Victim 2 to an apartment unit in Bloomington, Minnesota, which was leased by the organization for commercial sex activity. Victim 2 was advertised for commercial sex acts in the Bloomington, Minnesota area on backpage.com. Victim 2 was trafficked by the criminal organization to other cities in the United States, including to Phoenix, Arizona and Bloomington, Indiana.

19. The organization deals primarily in cash and engages in widespread money laundering in order to promote, receive, and conceal profits from its sex trafficking business. The illegal proceeds from the commercial sex transactions are often deposited in bank accounts in a manner so as to avoid detection, including depositing cash in smaller amounts to evade reporting requirements. Illegal proceeds are often used by sex trafficking organizations to further promote the sex trafficking operation, including through purchases of lodging and travel for the victims.

20. All in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1594(c).

THE PURPOSE OF THE CONSPIRACY

46. The purpose of the conspiracy was for the sex trafficking organization to make money by arranging for Thai women to travel to the United States and, at various houses of prostitution in cities throughout the United States, engage in innumerable commercial sex acts.

THE MANNER AND MEANS OF THE CONSPIRACY

47. To achieve the purpose of the conspiracy, the defendants, together with others known and unknown to the grand jury, used computers and cellular telephones with intent to promote, manage, establish, and carry on acts to facilitate the promotion, management, establishment, and carrying on the prostitution activities of the victims of the sex trafficking operation, including but not limited to Victim 1, Victim 2, and Victim 3. In particular, the defendants, together with others known and unknown to the grand jury, committed the following acts.

COUNT 8

Conspiracy to Commit Visa Fraud
18 U.S.C. § 371

51. The allegations contained in paragraphs 1 through 50 of this Indictment are re-alleged as if stated in full herein.

52. From on or about January 2009 through on or about September 2016, in the State and District of Minnesota and elsewhere, the defendants,

SUMALEE INTARATHONG,
a/k/a Joy,
a/k/a Alice Spencer Warren,

a/k/a Ying,
a/k/a Pam,
SUPAPON SONPRASIT,
a/k/a Ivy,
a/k/a Supapon Maki, and conspired, with one another and with others known and unknown to the grand jury, to commit an offense against the United States and to defraud the United States, and one or more did an act to effect the object of the conspiracy, that is, did knowingly utter, use, attempt to use, possess, obtain, accept and receive any visa, permit, border crossing card, alien registration receipt card and other document prescribed by statute or regulation for entry into and as evidence of authorized stay or employment in the United States, knowing it to be forged, counterfeited, altered and falsely made, and to have been procured by means of any false claim and statement, and to have been otherwise procured by fraud and unlawfully obtained, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1546.

PURPOSE OF THE CONSPIRACY

53. It was the purpose of the conspiracy for the sex trafficking organization to procure B1/B2 tourist visas for victims to travel to the United States to engage in innumerable commercial sex acts to benefit the sex trafficking organization, knowing that the B1/B2 tourist visas were obtained based, at least in part, on a false claim and statement that the victim/applicant had not engaged in prostitution acts in the past 10 years and was not entering the United States to engage in prostitution acts.

MANNER AND MEANS

54. The visa fraud was accomplished through a variety of means, but typically involved the victim applying for a B1/B2 tourist visa and subsequently overstaying the stated length of the "tourism" trip. The bosses/traffickers handled the visa paperwork, often providing the victim with a completed application to sign. The application included false statements that the victim had not previously engaged in prostitution activity and was not entering the United States to engage in prostitution acts.

55. The bosses/traffickers instructed the victims to open bank accounts in Thailand. These bank accounts were then funded by the trafficking organization so that the victims' visa applications were more likely to be approved. False address and employment information was also typically included on these visa applications.

56. The victims were then coached by the bosses/traffickers as to how to respond to immigration questions when they made entry to the United States. Victims were also told not to travel with items such as lingerie, as this might attract the attention of law enforcement.
